

Emily Wilding Davison is a suffragette that got ran over by the king's horse at the Epsom Derby while standing up for women's suffrage and she passed away from injuries 4 days later. She became famous after she died because women got the same rights as men and she deserves credit for the sacrifices she made.

I found that National Archives Website was the most helpful for my project. National Archives provided a lot of information that other websites didn't have on our topic, for example, news paper clippings, Emily at the Derby, and detailed timelines. Also, timelines were very helpful in finding out what Emily Wilding Davison's past was mainly about. I read a book by Maureen Howes and that was very helpful because it was about her family and childhood, such as her sisters and parents. The book also talked about how Emily's family reacted to her death and how they dealt with the false rumors.

The hardest part of the research so far is the Annotated Bibliography. Putting the resources in Alphabetical order was very time consuming as well as putting the website into Easybib and waiting for it to load all of your information. So far History fair has just been organizing your thoughts and information you found on websites. The best place to find information is history.com. This website has a lot of background on Emily Wilding Davison and the events in her life.

From learning about Emily Wilding Davison I learned a lot about Triumph and Tragedy. For instance, her getting ran over the kings horse was a major tragedy. However, she made a point to stand up for what she believed in and made a difference. Next, she died from injuries 4 days after the Derby. Also, she made a huge change in History and inspires many. Lastly, she started riots with many other women and tried for so long to make a difference and it is sad that to change something it costed her her own life. Overall, there are many triumphs and tragedies but sadly, her life ended in a tragedy.
